

Pandemic Flu

Are you prepared?

To date at least 2,837 people around the world have died from the swine flu virus since it emerged in April, according to the latest WHO figures (including 30 within the UK).

The media coverage given to the Swine Flu Pandemic has highlighted the potential severity of this virus on a global scale. Thankfully the worst case scenario has so far failed to materialise but, as we enter the Autumn/Winter months, experts predict the number of cases could be about to increase significantly.

The UK is preparing stocks of vaccinations, and officials have recently cut the estimated death toll in a worst-case scenario from 65,000 people to 19,000, assuming that 30% of the UK population is infected.

We have been busy developing a range of new products, in line with NHS advice and guidance, to help organisations prepare for the spread of swine flu, or indeed any future flu pandemic.

Our new Pandemic Flu Poster will inform employees of the signs and symptoms of pandemic flu, advising them of preventative actions to undertake. It also provides guidance to the organisation to help prepare them for the effects of a pandemic within the workplace.

One of our key messages is that of 'respiratory etiquette' and increased hygiene measures. Our new range of signs will help to enforce this policy throughout your organisation. Available to order now, you too can help prevent the spread of flu.
